

Our son was 11 when he saw Dr. Robson for the first time. Until this time he had never had a dry night. In fact, we thought that he was wetting more often at night than going in the day. We often thought he had a thimble size bladder. He is the type of kid that would sit quietly in class and not ask to leave or interrupt a teacher which only compounded the problem. He also was a heavy sleeper. We had tried many of the usual parenting tips given to us like toileting him before we went to bed and then again waking him during the night to go. He would hardly wake and despite our efforts the only accomplishment was parents absolutely fatigued and a wet bed anyways. We tried the DDAVP with very little effect.

Initially out of desperation we felt we had nothing to lose by seeing Dr. Robson. It was within a few minutes of our first appointment that we knew we had come to the right place. Dr. Robson was so affirming with our son and explained in detail how we would go about this as long as we were willing to put in the time and effort. There is a parent and child commitment to success, but well worth it. This was a great lesson for all of us to learn that nothing comes easy and we have to give our best effort. We began to notice a few intermittent dry nights within the first month. Each month we noted improvement. Now a year later we have never looked back, as each night we see a confident 12 year old who goes about his daily life waking up dry.

Thankyou Dr. Robson for your dedication and work with children and families of wetting problems. We appreciated being able to work with you to build our sons confidence and overcome a big hurdle for him.
